New tailgating policy receives 'resigned support'

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

Administrators met Tuesday with student organization leaders in an attempt to explain and gain support for the new tailgating policy, and the reaction was, by all accounts, one of "resigned support."

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said Wednesday that he and some of the other administrators involved in formulating the policy sat down with representatives from about 20 Registered Student Organizations and tried to "communicate the policy to them and the reasons for it, and (sought) their support of it as temporary until the end of the year."

The policy, announced Tuesday morning, limits alcohol consumption between the hours of 11:00 a.m. and 1:15 on days of home football games, bans kegs, and warns minors of the planned enforcement of underage drinking laws.

Asked to characterize the reaction, Swinburne said the general response was "Fine. We understand it's only for the last home three games, we'll support that."

Swinburne said there was scattered disagreement with some aspects of the policy, particularly the keg ban, but he said that, overall, the representatives "were understanding of the problem."

"We heard some very interesting ideas for a permanent policy that we'll definitely be looking into," he said.

Nicky Glasser, student senator from East Campus, also attended the meeting. She said there was some concern among those present that they were being asked to approve a policy already in place, but that "we pretty much went along with the plan. We knew it was only for this season, anyway."

Many at the meeting worried that the keg ban would lead to more trash, particularly glass bottles.

Liquor board rejects raising bar entry age

By Lisa Eisenhower
Staff Writer

The Liquor Advisory Board voted Tuesday to recommend that the Liquor Control Commission reject a proposed amendment to the city's liquor code that would prohibit people under 21 from entering liquor establishments.

The board's statement to the commission, which consists of the members of the City Council, will include a clause stating that the board has some alternatives to the proposal.

The board did not give any specifics about what these alternatives include, but during the discussion of the amendment several members said that enforcement of the present code needs to be upgraded.

Currently people under the age of 21 can go into bars but are expected to observe the state's drinking age. Police Chief Ed Hogan submitted the ordinance to the City Council in June. It asks that the liquor code be amended as a means of controlling underage drinking in bars.

No one attending the Tuesday meeting spoke against the proposed amendment and only one person spoke in support of it. Fire Chief Charles McCaughan.

McCaughan said while the state spends $1 million a year to keep drunk drivers off the road, Carbondale "produces the cause." He said some underage drinkers come to Carbondale from throughout the area just to drink.

"(Police Chief) Hogan has a problem, a bad problem, so I don't think he's asking anything out of line," McCaughan said. "I just can't believe that the city believes that the only thing there is to do here is go uptown and drink."

John Mills, board chairman, said no one on the board was so naive as to believe the ordinance would stop underage drinking. He also said the city treats the students like "second-class citizens" a lot of times.

"If students are not allowed to go downtown they've got to have someplace to go and they don't," Mills said. He noted that letters to other cities with colleges brought no solutions to dealing with underage drinking.

Another member of the board, Roy Miller, submitted a 15-point list for the other board members to consider. Miller's list consisted of suggestions for alleviating the underage drinking problem other than banning people under the age of 21 from all bars.

Included in Miller's list were suggestions to allow only people above 21 in bars that do not have live entertainment or a dance floor and to prohibit the sale of beer in pitchers at other bars.

Board member Jeff Olsson said that one of the downtown bars, Hangar 9, has already stopped selling beer in pitchers. He also said they have a very low incidence of underage drinking violations.

University files for summary judgment in lawsuit

By Karen Wiltberger
Staff Writer

The University has filed a motion for summary judgment in its favor in response to $1.14 million suit filed against SIU and the Board of Trustees by an attorney for Virginia Cline, owner of the Bracy Building in Marion.

Shari Rhode, chief trial attorney for the University, has asked the Court of Claims in Springfield to dismiss the case for lack of evidence on the claim for breach of contract seeking $925,000 in damages, and for a claim for rental damages seeking $197,000 in back rent for a year and seven months.

The motion was submitted to the court on Sept. 26 along with an affidavit by President Albert Somit. Rhode said Wednesday that the court could grant summary judgment in 30 days, which is the number of days Cline's attorney has to reply to the motion.

"It depends how fast the court wants to move on this," Rhode said, adding that the court has no minimum time frame to review the case.

James K. Powless, attorney for Cline, said Tuesday that he just received a copy of the motion, and will reply "definitely by next week."

He said his main objective is to seek breach of contract damages, and he will continue to try to prove that the University exercised the option to purchase the building, which would result in breach of contract.

Powless said the second count seeking rental damages is an alternative claim, saying that the court would grant one claim or the other.

The University's motion on the breach of contract claim states that because the University never secured funding for purchase of the

IRS tells Bush to pay additional taxes

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service, following an audit of George Bush's 1981 tax returns, directed the vice president to pay an additional $198,000 in taxes and interest, his attorneys revealed Wednesday.

The IRS required most of the additional payments — now being contested by Bush — after disallowing a tax deferral the vice president had claimed on profits from the sale of his Houston residence. The tax agency also required that part of a $91,852 campaign fund surplus that Bush had left over from his 1980 presidential bid be counted as income.

The IRS routinely audits the returns of the president and vice president.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, paid $245,491 in federal income taxes in 1981. His attorneys said he is contesting $144,128 of the additional tax payment, plus $54,000 in interest that he was required to pay following the audit.

Attorney Dean Burch said the IRS ruling will be appealed and will be carried to tax court if required. "We're likely to get it turned down (by the IRS)," said Bob Yorty, an attorney with Burch.

Burch said that Bush has not seen the tax returns.

Specifically, the IRS ruled: —Bush was wrong in deferring taxes on the profits he made in selling his Houston house. Bush tried to defer them on grounds that he'd bought a more expensive house in Maine, but the IRS said that house didn't count because Bush's main residence was in Washington.

—He erred in taking tax deductions for a contribution to the Republican National

Challenger's radar camera to aid in environmental study

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — When the shuttle Challenger soars into space Friday it will carry a radar camera that scientists hope will detect ancient lost cities, icebergs, oil spills and forests damaged by acid rain. "It's very important because it's going to help us understand our environment and the processes shaping our environment," said Charles Elachi, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory physicist heading the 13-nation project for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Known as Shuttle Imaging Radar-B, or SIR-B, the device's 35-by-7-foot antenna will be aimed at Earth from Challenger's open cargo bay for 50 hours during the eight-day shuttle flight. The antenna will beam radar microwaves at the planet's surface, record the echoes and relay them via satellite to Earth.

Judge found guilty of tax evasion, faces jail, fine

RENO, Nev. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Harry Claiborne was sentenced Wednesday to two years in prison and fined $10,000 for income tax evasion, becoming the first federal judge ordered jailed for crimes committed while on the bench. His lawyers said they will appeal the sentence. Presiding Judge Walter E. Hoffman of Virginia sentenced Claiborne to two years on each of two counts of tax evasion. The sentences are to run concurrently. He ordered Claiborne to serve his time at a federal institution at Maxwell Air Force Base at Montgomery, Ala.

Misuse of military funds enrages congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen expressed outrage Wednesday that most of the $8 million set aside so military facilities could be adapted as shelters for the homeless had been spent by the Army on routine maintenance. "That I think is just shocking," said Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., chairman of the subcommittee that was told of the defense department spending. The general accounting office said that in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, $200,000 was used to upgrade a facility for the homeless in Alameda County, Calif., and $700,000 has been obligated for a similar project in Philadelphia. "The balance of the money has been spent in Army reserve fix-up operations" to repair "defense facilities for defense purposes," said Paul C. Wright of the GAO, the congressional audit agency.

No life preservers found aboard sunken ship

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Investigators said Wednesday they found no life preservers aboard a chartered ship that sank after a collision in Hamburg harbor, killing 19 revelers on a birthday champagne cruise. The cause of the Tuesday night disaster had not been determined as investigators raised the battered blue wreckage of the 47-foot Martina and towed it to a shipyard. The husband and wife who chartered the vessel to celebrate his 40th birthday were among 24 people rescued, but their two sons were presumed drowned.

Prison officials found liable for damages incurred in riot

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal jury Wednesday found two former Illinois prison officials responded to the bloody 1978 riot at the Pontiac Correctional Center with "deliberate indifference" to the safety of prison guards. The officials were found liable for damages in the deaths of three guards and injuries to three others during the incident. A six-member U.S. District Court jury deliberated about eight hours over two days before returning a verdict in the $24 million civil lawsuit brought by the injured guards and the families of the slain guards.

Suburban teens linked to nighttime raid crimes

BARRINGTON HILLS (AP) — In paramilitary get-up of camouflage uniforms and blackened faces, six teen-agers from wealthy families made dozens of nighttime crime raids on their neighbors in this exclusive area near Chicago, police said Wednesday. The 16-year-old boys, all of whom lived in the vicinity, may be responsible for up to 50 crimes in the area in the last 18 months, including burglary, theft, arson and vandalism, said Robert Lamb, Barrington Hills police chief. He said police already have linked the youths to 31 crimes. More than $5,000 in stolen property has been recovered and the youths are believed responsible for several thousands dollars in property damage, Lamb added.

Senate in marathon session to meet funding bill deadline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, eager to adjourn by week's end, lurched toward a midnight Wednesday deadline for approving emergency spending legislation that is necessary to keep the government from shutting down for lack of money.

"We aren't going to be able to finish...by midnight. We just cannot do it," declared Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., before the Senate began its second marathon session in two days in the hope of completing work on the money bill.

Reagan administration officials raised the possibility that if Congress did not meet the deadline, government workers might be sent home on Thursday.

The bulk of the federal government already was operating under a three-day financing measure that President Reagan signed Wednesday, just hours before it was to expire at midnight. The long-term bill before the Senate would provide about $467 billion to federal agencies for the entire fiscal year, which began Monday.

Baker said Congress might have to pass a second stopgap measure to give the Senate more time to complete work on the long-term spending bill, which House-Senate negotiators must then fashion into a final compromise.

Before completing action, the Senate still faced disputes over foreign aid, military spending and water projects.

Nonetheless, Baker said he still expected Congress to meet its adjournment target of late Friday afternoon.

The White House Office of Management and Budget told federal departments that their employees should report for work as usual on Thursday. Then officials would assess what progress Congress is making toward approving a spending bill acceptable to Reagan.

"The call will be made tomorrow (Thursday) morning," said budget office spokesman Edwin L. Dale Jr.

An administration memorandum circulated among government offices Wednesday reiterated that the House version of the omnibus spending bill was unacceptable, and that Reagan might make the same judgment about the compromise measure that finally passes Congress.

The memorandum told federal officials to be prepared to carry out "agency shutdown plans" if it appears that Congress will not act quickly to provide money for the government.

Action on the long-term money bill, and the expiring stopgap measure, became necessary because only four of 13 regular appropriations bills for fiscal 1985 have been signed into law.

Employees involved in national security and other essential services would not be sent home in any case.

6,000 voters registered by USO

By David Liss
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization registered close to 6,000 voters in its registration drive, said Jack Cranley, USO vice president.

"There are more registered students on this campus than ever before," Cranley said. The drive broke the previous record of 5,300 set in 1972 shortly after the constitution was amended to allow 18-year-olds to vote.

"More students registered in this drive than in the 1980 and 1982 drives combined," USO President Andy Leighton said.

The drive ended Tuesday, the last day that voter registrars-at-large could register. Eligible voters can still register at the Carbondale City Clerk's office until Oct. 9, Cranley said.

"Now the important thing is to make sure these people get out to vote on Election Day," he said. "Hopefully the students will realize their impact on state legislators if they go out and vote."

The final count for the registration drive should be completed within a day or two, Cranley said. The USO drive was part of a community wide drive, he said, with 18 Carbondale civic organizations and 40 registered student organizations participating. Their combined goal is 10,000 registrations.

FBI arrests its own agent on espionage charge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The FBI arrested one of its own agents on espionage charges Wednesday, accusing the California-based counterspy of selling secrets to a female Soviet agent who government sources say may have been his lover, and to her estranged husband.

Special Agent Richard W. Miller, 47, a 20-year FBI veteran said to have been in financial trouble, was the first FBI agent ever charged with espionage and the case marked the first known foreign infiltration of the FBI.

Miller, a counterspy based in Los Angeles, was arrested at his home and appeared before U.S. Magistrate Roger McKee in San Diego. He was ordered back to court Thursday to face a charge of conspiracy to gather defense information to aid a foreign government. Maximum penalty upon conviction would be life in prison.

No bail was allowed because "flight is a real strong risk," Assistant U.S. Attorney Ray Edwards said. A court document says there was a plan for Miller to go to Vienna, Austria, or Warsaw, Poland.

No plea was entered. Miller winked at his wife, Paula, in court, and she waved. The couple exchanged sign language messages.

Svetlana Ogorodnikova, 34, of Los Angeles, an alleged KGB major, and husband Nikolay Ogorodnikov, also known as Nikolay Wolfson, 51, were also arrested and charged Wednesday in Los Angeles. The FBI said they were born in the Soviet Union and emigrated to the United States in 1973.

Ogorodnikov, who works for a local sausage factory, appeared before U.S. Magistrate Volney Brown on Wednesday. Dressed in a sweatshirt, blue jeans and a baseball cap, he said he was destitute, with just $85 in his savings account. He removed his cap when he stood before Brown.

The couple is separated and embroiled in a dispute over custody of their 13-year-old child. The father currently has custody, officials said.

Probation-sentencing officer Leroy Washington said he interviewed Ogorodnikov, who said that while he was in the Soviet Union in 1965, he was arrested and accused of being an American spy.

"However, those charges were dismissed," Washington said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Kendall argued that "the risk of flight is extreme" because the Ogorodnikovs are still Soviet citizens and could be taken out of the country by Soviet agents if freed.

He noted that when arrested, Ogorodnikov was armed with a loaded semi-automatic pistol.

The magistrate ordered Ogorodnikov held without bail but said he was entitled to a bail hearing in 24 hours if he requests one.

The FBI said its information was based on interviews with Miller and Mrs. Ogorodnikova, surveillance of all three, court-approved electronic bugging of the Soviet couple's apartment and a search of Miller's residence to which he agreed.

Richard Bretzing, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles FBI office, said Mrs. Ogorodnikova's cover was a job as a day nurse and her husband worked as a butcher in a sausage factory.

"This is a very sad day for us," FBI Director William Webster said at a ceremony honoring 26 slain agents in Washington.

"If true," said former Los Angeles agent-in-charge Herbert Clough, "this would be the first known situation" involving foreign infiltration of the FBI.

Adding EPA clout

THE SANGAMO ELECTRIC CO. waste site at Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge received some recognition of its hazardous condition this week when it was nominated for inclusion on the Environmental Protection Agency's Superfund roster.

The EPA action demonstrates the potential for the site to fall into the gray areas of federal bureaucracy. Because it is located on federal property, the site is not eligible for funding under the EPA's $1.6 billion Superfund clean-up program.

EPA spokesman Lee Thomas said that the 36 waste sites located on federal properties were included on the nomination list to "focus public attention and public resources on the most serious sites." In addition, the sites, must undergo a one-year review before being formally added to the Superfund list.

The action by the EPA at first glance seems to be a little silly because of the slim chance for Superfund funding. But the Superfund list is more than a shopping list for EPA funding. It lists the hazardous waste sites specified by the EPA as most hazardous and sets an agenda for clean-up priority.

U.S. Senator Charles Percy and U.S. Representative Paul Simon are both currently fighting for funding from Congress for a study of the site, which was contaminated from the building of electrical transformers with polychlorinated biphenols, or PCBs, more than 20 years ago.

Funding for the study, which is necessary before actual clean-up can begin, is not easily obtainable, as both Simon and Percy are finding out. But they now have even more justification in asking for funding. The site to be funded is listed by the EPA as one of the worst in the nation.

After 3 years of economic ills, Continental on road to recovery

Editor's Note: The following commentary was written by David H. Everson, Joan A. Parker and Jack R. Van Der Slik of the Illinois Legislative Studies Center at Sangamon State University.

It is too early to tell for sure, but the vital signs are improving at Continental Illinois Bank. The big downtown Chicago bank, with its high pillars and conservative external facade, has been the scene of great financial turmoil for the past three years, ever since it invested heavily (over $1 billion) in the Penn Square Bank of Oklahoma City, which collapsed in 1982.

Historically Continental was a heartland bank that broke out from the more usual pattern of investing its resources close to home. In 1981, it attained the peak of its powers, and was the largest commercial and industrial lender in the United States. At the time of the Mideast oil crisis, Continental executives had seen the main chance in oil and energy stocks, particularly in underdeveloped nations in Africa and Latin America. Hard currencies were needed there to bring those resources, especially oil, into the market place.

BUT THE BIG move did not catch the crest of the oil market. Instead, conservation measures, enlarged Mideast oil supplies and changing patterns of consumption left Continental with big outstanding loans to debtors who had little capacity to repay.

By 1982, when the Penn Square failure dramatized Continental's foreign vulnerabilities, another problem with its domestic loans became apparent: Continental had invested heavily in turgid industries of the Midwest's rust bowl. So smart money in New York investment houses quit buying Continental's certificates of deposit in 1982.

Another of Continental's problems has been its difficulty in attracting consumer deposits. Like all Illinois banks, Continental is limited by Illinois law in its ability to build that consumer deposit base. Illinois law narrowly restricts branch banking. As anyone living in metropolitan Chicago knows, all the suburban towns have their particular, mostly local owned, banks. Were that not the case, Continental Illinois and First Chicago, among others, would have branches all over the metropolitan area, and perhaps more widespread around the state.

THE RUN ON the bank this spring was made by big institution depositors, those with deposits of more than $100,000, not Illinoisans with savings accounts for houses, cars and sending the kids to college. The institution's deposits in excess of $100,000 were not covered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. That is why the FDIC made a commitment to cover all deposits without regard to amount. Without that assurance, institutional investors from the United States and abroad would have literally broken the bank.

How bad the bad news became is perhaps marked best by the stock market. In the past five years the high for Continental Illinois' stock was $42.75 per share. As late as Feb. 1, 1984 it was over $21. The bottom this summer put that same share price at $2.75.

IT IS NOT JUST stockholders who suffered. The bank's two top officers were replaced. The roster of employees has been reduced by 2,000. The bank has moved to sharply cut its contributions to a vast range of not-for-profit community agencies like the Chicago Council of the Arts. It sold some of its assets, like its credit card operation. It will retrench its policy of aggressively making loans nationwide.

But the FDIC installed new leadership. John E. Swearingin, retired chairman of Standard Oil of Indiana, assumed the top position; William F. Ogden, a former vice president at Chase Manhattan Corporation, will head operations. One of Swearingin's incentives is the option to buy 400,000 shares of Continental stock at $4.50 a share. At the end of last week the stock price had recovered to $4.87 a share.

From recent ads in Chicago papers, Continental is going for local investors. Last week it announced "a major move in interest rates on insured money market accounts: 11 percent." But it does not want quick in-and-outers. While not guaranteeing a rate, it says, "we plan to pay a rate on our Money Market Account through 1985 that is higher than the average paid by the money market funds."

CHANCES ARE GOOD that Continental will get healthy again. And when it does there is going to be new pressure to change Illinois branch banking laws. Smaller suburban and downtown banks will have to fight to keep the legal protection they enjoy. One little known advantage the small banks hold is written into the 1970 Illinois Constitution. "Branch banking shall be authorized only by law approved by three-fifths of the members voting on the question..." Banking deregulation is an issue to watch in Illinois after the election.

But as far as depositors are concerned, Continental is, in the words of the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency, "probably the safest bank in the world to deal with today."

A day to remember

Oct. 4, 1984, marks an obscure but important anniversary that should be noted on college and university campuses throughout the United States. The Free Speech Movement was born 20 years ago at the University of California at Berkeley.

The leaders of the Free Speech Movement occupied the office of the president on the Berkeley campus for the first time on that day, setting off the rebellion of America's youth that swept the country in the 1960s.

Those idealistic students at Berkeley were protesting the social order they had adopted from preceding generations. The war in Vietnam had yet to become a major issue permeating the consciousness of America.

Campuses across the nation, including SIU-C, were forced to close because of riotous conditions. The movement grew progressively bolder with the reinforcement of the anti-war sentiment until its peak in the spring of 1970, when four students were killed at Kent State.

From that time, the movement began to moderate. Today, at the University of California at Berkeley, a majority of students say they support President Reagan, burr haircuts are the latest style, and marketing and engineering courses have overtaken English and history.

How easy it is to forget.

Civil service raises delayed

I don't know about you, but this native is getting restless with the Civil Service Bargaining Organization negotiations which are beginning to sound more like the Great American Impasse. Come on, negotiators, I am tired of waiting for my 6 percent, even if it means only brushing the poverty line. While you all sit at the negotiating table deciding my financial fate, all I am wishing for is to buy a couple more bags of potatoes next Friday night. I bet things get a little out of perspective up there discussing the same issues week after week, but believe me, it is crystal clear down here that life in the secretarial pool isn't exactly bikinis and pina colodas.

Now I also know it looks like more money when you get your back pay in October or November (or next July?) but if the negotiations are going to hold this up every year we ought to get some interest on this money. I resent my money sitting dormant when I could be using it at my house on the ends that are refusing to meet these days. I think you ought to start negotiating now for next year's raise.

I am not debating the side of the union or the University, but I'd like to make a point for those of us who sit here waiting. I sincerely appreciate the raise, but it is starting to seem silly to go through all this for 6 percent. And the union wants me to pay dues for this? Its no wonder I can't take it seriously. — Angela Hooker, Secretary Trans IV.

IRS: Bush told to pay more taxes

Committee that came not from money he earned, but from a surplus of 1980 campaign donations. Deductions for fixing up the vice presidential offices were allowable, the IRS said, so long as the contributions were added to Bush's income.

The contested tax return came to light when Bush campaign aides released the vice president's tax returns for the years 1981, 1982 and 1983. Bush had declined to release those returns earlier, contending that the terms of a 1981 blind trust forbid him from seeing the returns or making them public.

Burch told a news conference here, following a Bush campaign appearance, that the trust was modified to permit the tax returns to be released. Bush did not attend the session, heading for a later appearance in Tulsa.

According to the returns, Bush paid 48.6 percent of his adjusted gross income as taxes in 1981. In 1982, the figure was 24.2 percent and it was 12.8 percent in 1983.

The session put Bush under much the same spotlight as his Democratic opponent, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, who revealed her tax and financial status in August. Her own audit, conducted for the disclosure, convinced Ferraro and her husband to pay $53,459 to cover an underpayment of taxes on a 1978 real estate sale.

Ferraro and her husband paid an average of about 40 percent of their income in taxes, over a comparable four-year period.

The reason Bush hadn't seen his tax returns is that a blind trust set up by the vice president in 1981 included a power of attorney that would enable the W. S. Farish Co. of Houston to control most of Bush's assets and to file his tax returns. Burch said this was to prevent Bush from knowing the investments that had been made.

LAWSUIT: Case dismissal sought

Bracy Building, it did not exercise the option to buy the building.

The lease between Cline and the University provides that "before the University can exercise the option to purchase, the University must secure funding by action of the Illinois Legislature."

The motion states in reference to the claim for rental damages that the University had two obligations under the lease to "continue custody of the building" and to "diligently attempt to secure funding."

The University fulfilled its obligations under the contract, and therefore did not have to pay rent for the last year and seven months it occupied the facility, the motion says.

The only change in the suit since June 12 when it was filed is an out-of-court settlement between Cline and the University for property damages. Rhode said that the University paid $16,000 to Cline this summer for damages and repairs to the warehouse, dropping a claim that sought $22,244 in alleged damages.

Rhode said the University agreed to maintain the building and never denied that responsibility.

Rhode said she doesn't expect there to be a lengthy trial if summary judgment is not granted, but would not know when to expect a trial. "It's pending in the courts."

Aztec Camera's newest effort is too mellow for its own good

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

Aztec Camera's newest release, "Knife," is anything but affirmation of the band's maturity as a respectable member of the rock 'n' roll community. It's even difficult to classify Aztec Camera as rock 'n' roll in the first place.

Under the direction of 20-year-old Roddy Frame, Aztec Camera seems to be trying to define its own particular niche in music. The band is decidedly soft on electric, instead opting for a more subdued, mellow brand of rock.

The band tries to avoid offending anyone by coming on too strong, but the final effect of this is perhaps worse than if they had done so. Song after song is guilty of over-production and over-pasteurization.

The music may be all right in its original form, but for some reason, when many of today's musicians get to a studio, with its state-of-the-art mixing equipment, the honesty and simplicity of the original product becomes increasingly watered down. This is the greatest problem with "Knife," — it's got no guts, no honesty.

An Album Review

There are a number of indicators that suggest the music offered possibilities for expansion. Most songs contain strong choruses and the chord changes are inoffensive enough. But the greatest missed opportunity is the band's unwillingness to make the most of the frequent instrumental breaks. One wonders why Frame bothers to set up these breaks when only empty space ensues.

Although the band doesn't lack raw talent, it doesn't seem to be too preoccupied with proving it. There are maybe three or four instances in which the musicians, notably lead guitarist Malcolm Ross, take charge and let their instruments do the talking.

But even here the most wayward effort will offer a ray of sunshine. The final two numbers are pretty good. "The Birth of the True," a white boy blues number in the tradition of former Jefferson Airplane guitarist and drug guru Jorma Kaukonen, reveals Frame's down home roots. Its unpretentious simpleness is hard to argue with.

The title cut starts off like a champ. Acoustic guitar, together with some surprisingly well-defined synthesizer work, creates a floating, melodic feeling. But unfortunately, once Frame opens his mouth the music immediately begins to suffer from the same awful malady that most of the album does.

Too much 'hooplah'

Focus of election should be on issues, experts say

By Carys Edwards
Staff Writer

Of the billions of words being churned out by political reporters covering the presidential election campaign, too many focus on the "hooplah," rather than the campaign issues, say two experts on political communication from SIU-C.

Television, in particular, skirts the surface of the issues, focusing instead on the candidate's image, the latest public opinion poll, and the size and enthusiasm of the crowds or hecklers, say John S. Jackson III, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Keith R. Sanders, dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts.

REPORTING on the campaign "horse-race" does little damage, Sanders explained, but with too much emphasis it "crowds out information more pertinent to a sound voting decision: Irrelevant information chases relevant information off the stage," he said.

If the public is to be politically well-educated by the time they cast their votes for President Ronald Reagan or presidential candidate Walter Mondale on Nov. 6, the media should be emphasizing the "really important considerations," Sanders said.

"What matters is who he is and what he is likely to do to make all of our lives better," he said.

THE CANDIDATES political stand on nuclear issues or the federal deficit, for example, should have greater coverage, he said.

Both Jackson and Sanders said a more in-depth and issue-oriented approach is important for TV broadcasting because of its powerful influence on election campaigns. They said 95 percent of the American public has access to a TV set; the average American watches five hours of TV every day, and surveys show the majority of the American public gets information on political candidates from TV rather than the radio or print media. Research also shows that most people are more likely to believe TV reports than reports from other media.

Jackson said that TV's emphasis on candidate images is more dominant in 1984, with Mondale and Reagan, than ever before.

"REAGAN IS a master at manipulating symbols and images, especially his own image," he said. "He's so good on TV and people love it, and that's why he's 15-30 points ahead in the polls."

In comparison, Jackson said that Mondale "comes across as cold and aloof on TV. He's terrible on TV, which is one of his main problems this year."

Jackson said TV's political influence is reflected in the recent public opinion polls. They show that "a significant number of people disagree with Reagan on virtually all the major issues, but they're still voting for him," Jackson said, "so it can't be issues they're voting for."

SANDERS ALSO criticized the negative approach of many reporters to America's political institutions, leaders and the political process. He said this may cause "long-term damage to the fundamental values and institutions of democracy."

"It tends to reduce hope. If a potential voter has no hope that his or her vote can make a difference, why vote?" he said.

Both Jackson and Sanders, who have studied the political process in mass media for over a decade, were optimistic about the future of political coverage on TV, however.

"There has been a slow but steady improvement in the quality of political communication available to citizens in this country. I think it will continue," Sanders said.

JACKSON AGREED, saying that whereas many of the present TV journalists entered the media with no particular training or academic background, the upcoming college graduates are "better educated in general. They have a new and stronger ability to analyze in-depth rather than superficially, as we have been doing so far."

Or you could take them down to the strip but could you really see your own mother getting "down & dirty"? The only viable alternative for both you and your parents has got to be Fred's.

Do those plastic swords and little paper umbrellas make the drink worth a dollar more? (Fred's editorial comment)

Philosopher sees need for 'new order'

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

As a Marxist philosopher, Janusz Kuczynski believes in the principle of order, leading to community, as a basic organizational pattern of society. This is in opposition to the principle of individuality, which usually results in a capitalistic society. Yet, though the two principles seem incompatible, Kuczynski believes that a new order, based on both principles, must be fashioned to ensure the survival of the world into the 21st century.

Kuczynski, a professor of philosophy at Warsaw University in Poland, spoke on "Creativity as Creative Interchange Between Marxist and Non-Marxist Worlds" Tuesday afternoon at the Student Center. He was invited to speak at SIU-C by William Minor, faculty member in speech communications. Minor has published articles in Dialectics and Humanism, a philosophy journal that Kuczynski edits.

Janusz Kuczynski

KUCZYNSKI stated that he is concerned with the escalation of tensions between the Marxist and non-Marxist worlds, and believes that something must be done by philosophers to avert pending world destruction.

This destruction is not inevitable, he said.

"If we have good philosophy, we can change the situation for the better," he said. "The point is how we can invent this philosophy, because existing philosophies are not satisfactory."

He proposed what he called a new conception — universalism — to be used in solving this problem.

"Universalism would give us the possibility of establishing a new area of meeting, in which we can meet, leaving our previous philosophical conviction, by a way which is not new — by using dialectics and supersession to transcend the previous stage, but at the same time, keep the values of the present stage," he said.

KUCZYNSKI said he would use the social sciences, which establish the principle of order, to create a new world order that incorporates both principles.

Part of solving the problems between these two societies lies in viewing history as a process where passage from one stage to the next is not immediate and inevitable, as is taught in classical Marxist theory, Kuczynski said. Rather, history must be viewed as being influenced by those involved in the passages — that philosophers and other social scientists can play a crucial role at the time of passage by raising the consciousness of society, Kuczynski believes.

THIS VIEW of history allows for a future society "which will probably be united, to be based not on one picture, one monolithic vision, but on the achievements of many societies," not just two superpowers, he said.

This future society must be united, he said, although there are varying degrees of unity. Participants would be allowed to retain their original convictions. This society will be socialist and democratic, as societies in the union will each have a part in the process of history, he said.

The socialist principle of order would be combined with individuality in this society. "Individuality and community go together," Kuczynski said. "An order-only world is dead. We need the differences. Individuality is the highest value in the hierarchy of values."

PHILOSOPHERS can influence the situation through their books and papers, particularly in countries where philosophers are highly respected. "In my country, the words of philosophers are regarded almost as official interpretation," Kuczynski said.

If something new is written by an important philosopher, and accepted, "the border of our freedom is developed, and of our usefulness, too," Kuczynski said.

The concept of global education may play a role in developing dialogues between Marxist and non-Marxist societies, he thinks. By studying subjects such as history and economics from different viewpoints, students will be prepared for a more international life, as the world population increases.

"The concept of global education is a good way to prepare people for living in a shrinking world, where we will be united or we will perish," Kuczynski said.

HE LEARNED much about this topic while lecturing at the University of Southern California prior to visiting SIU-C. He expressed an interest in studying and lecturing on the topic in Poland.

Kuczynski has been professor of philosophy at Warsaw University since 1975. He received his doctoral degree from the university in 1962 and has been a faculty member since 1957. He is on the editorial board of the Polish Academy of Sciences, the highest science institution in Poland, he said. The academy funds research in all sciences, including social sciences. Membership in the academy is the highest academic rank a person can possess in Poland.

Kuczynski is also editor-in-chief of Dialectics and Humanism. "My policy will always be to build bridges," he said, saying that he publishes articles by Marxist, non-Marxist, Christian, phenomenology, and other types of philosophers. "The exchange of opposites builds mutual understanding," he said.

Exercise helps prevent heart attack, report says

BOSTON (AP) — Regular jogging, chopping wood and other rugged exercise helps protect men from cardiac arrest, even though the odds of suffering one of these seizures is higher during the workout than at other times, a study has found.

The researchers believe their work settles a long-standing controversy — whether the benefits of strenuous exercise outweigh its risks — on the side of the benefits.

The issue was raised again last July when author Jim Fixx, who helped spur the running craze in the United States, died of a heart attack while jogging in Vermont.

"For the first time, one study appears to resolve the apparent contradiction posed by the occurrence of deaths during exercise on the one hand and the burgeoning reports of the benefits of habitual exercise in coronary heart disease on the other," said an editorial.

Beg your pardon

The two bands scheduled for the Friday of "City Fair Days," Oct. 26-27, were not booked by the SIUC Student Programming Council as published Oct. 3.

Scott Ratter, assistant city manager, said that SPC was not involved in setting up the bands for Friday night. He said the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce is paying for the bands and that the chamber arranged for the bands with the help of the city staff.

Ratter also said that the total published with the research in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The study found, essentially, that hard exercise both increases and decreases the risk budget released by SPC for the bands for Saturday of Fair Days is $5,500 — not $4,600 as reported — and that the City Council passed an ordinance, not a resolution, restricting booths to East Grand Avenue during the celebration.

The chamber and Park District, which has contributed to the entertainment fund for the celebration, are both city agencies but not city government agencies.

of cardiac arrest, a sudden lack of heart beat that can result from a heart attack, a heart rhythm disturbance or some other cardiac crisis.

During a workout, men are more likely than usual to have these often-fatal seizures. But the rest of the time, their risk of cardiac arrest is substantially lower. And on balance, men who exercise regularly have a better chance than sedentary men of escaping them.

"One needs to try to weigh the risks and the benefits," said Dr. David S. Siscovick, who directed the research. "That's what this study did."

Top quiz game team wins $500

The Dissipated Structures are the winners in the College Bowl competition. This team triumphed over four other teams in the finals Monday to win a $500 prize in the Bowl.

The Bowl is a quiz game in which students can be asked questions from a variety of subject areas. It is "the varsity sport of the mind," according to Beth Franck, of the Student Programming Council. A total of 18 teams with a maximum of four players each competed in the Bowl.

The Dissipated Structures beat the second place team the Existentialists 195-150. The second place team won a $400 prize.

The first place team and members of the top four teams will be part of an All-Star team which will compete in the regional competition at the University of Illinois against schools from Illinois and Indiana. They will also compete against a team made up of SIU-C administrators.

Members of the first place team are: captain Charles Cobb, Paul Webb and Robert Gustafson. Members of the second place team include captain Jim Bangs, Bill Hanrahan, Keith Leavitt and Rick Luczak.

Cerebral Cortex and the Artifacts won third and fourth places respectively.

The prize for the first place winner was furnished by the office of the vice president for student affairs. The prize for second place was furnished by the office of the vice president for academic affairs.

Playoff crowd different breed

CHICAGO (AP) — Many of the fans crowding into Wrigley Field for the National League Championship Series were a different breed from the diehard Bleacher Bums who have backed the Cubs against all odds through the years.

For one thing, Bleacher Bums don't arrive in chauffeur-driven limousines, or wear gray pin-striped suits with red ties, as did many of those in the postseason crowd.

Only 7,000 tickets were made available to the general public for the post-season games and that changed the stadium's clientele — especially in the low-priced bleachers.

"It's nothing like the last two months of the season," said Dave Schultz of Chicago, a regular in the bleachers.

"The fans before were more electric and spirited" during the regular season, he said before Wednesday's game — the second in the Cubs National League championship battle with the San Diego Padres. "This series is sterile and neutered. It's not really a Chicago happening."

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES IN PHYSICAL EDUCATION TO SUIT YOUR NEEDS.

Did you know that the Department of Physical Education now offers programs which qualify graduates for positions as teachers in elementary and secondary schools, or for alternative careers in private, industrial, and public settings? Whatever your career aims you will find a full range of intriguing and challenging professional opportunities in diversified specialties.

You can select a degree specialization best suited to your interests, talents, temperament and future plans. While studying new concepts, you will observe the work of outstanding teachers, athletic coaches and clinicians. Whichever direction you take, you will study and practice in modern facilities, with the latest equipment, and learn the most recent techniques.

SPECIALTIES

TEACHER EDUCATION

The Teacher Education program consists of courses which are designed to meet the requirements of the Illinois State Department of Education and are, in most cases, transferable to meet requirements of other states. The laboratory and classroom experiences in our program consist of basic and applied sciences, methods of teaching, and acquisition of physical skills which include a variety of team and individual sports, exercise and dance.

EXERCISE SCIENCE AND PHYSICAL FITNESS

This program is designed for students who wish to direct physical fitness programs in private, industrial and public settings. Preparation in this program enables the graduate to assess components of adult fitness, design individual exercise programs for the development and maintenance of physical fitness, and manage a physical fitness program. Graduates will have the foundation for continued study at the graduate level.

ATHLETIC TRAINING

The Athletic Training program is designed to train students to provide exemplary first-aid care for student-athletes, and administer rehabilitation, therapeutic treatment, and preventative conditioning programs under the supervision of a physician. This program prepares graduates for careers as Athletic Trainers in public schools, colleges and private and industrial settings.

DANCE

The Dance program offers specializations in dance pedagogy and in performance/choreography. The curriculum is designed to prepare the dancer both in education and in the performing and choreographic arts. Students in dance can audition to become members of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Company — the resident company serving both faculty and students.

SPECIAL PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Many handicapped students exhibiting learning problems also exhibit motor development deficiencies. Teachers trained in Special Education are responsible for delivering motor skill instruction to their students, but often lack the theoretical knowledge necessary to educate handicapped children. The Department of Physical Education offers an interdisciplinary approach to training, to address this pre-service deficiency. Graduates from this program are certified to teach in both areas. This allows the student to seek employment as a Special Education classroom teacher, a regular Physical Education teacher, and adapted Physical Education teacher, or any combination thereof.

MINOR AREAS OF STUDY

Students wishing to gain experience in areas related to Physical Education, may pursue programs of study in Aquatics, Coaching, Athletic Training, Dance, and Health. In all programs, students are in contact with faculty members whose reputations are nationally and internationally known, and whose achievements encompass research, teaching and service.

City newspaper collector says recycling business is picking up

By Lisa Eisenauer
Staff Writer

Don McWhorter says he is pleased with the amount of newsprint he collects during his monthly pick-up runs. But after his first collection in July 1983, he had his doubts.

McWhorter, the holder of Carbondale's newspaper recycling franchise, said that on his first time out he collected about 500 pounds of newsprint. Now he gets that much from the least productive section of town and usually collects about six tons a month.

"I realized we were going to have to build something out of it when we started and we're still building," he said, adding the city has been "very cooperative."

WHEN THE recycling program was started in 1982, an ordinance was passed requiring residents of all single family households to separate newsprint from other trash and to leave it on the curb for a monthly pickup.

Scott Ratter, assistant city manager, said that although the city has no way to ensure compliance, most residents seem to be happy to take part in the project voluntarily.

"Certainly we encourage compliance but we don't sift through anybody's trash and

'We encourage compliance, but we don't sift through anybody's trash and check.'

—Scott Ratter

check," Ratter said. "We felt that once the law was passed most folks would comply."

McWhorter said he doesn't think much paper winds up with the rest of the trash but that it's hard to tell because there's no way to know how many people subscribe to newspapers.

COLLECTION RUNS are made the first full week of each month, Monday through Thursday. The city is divided into four sections and McWhorter covers one each day. He said he spends about two-and-a-half hours each day covering a section and usually begins around 10 a.m.

McWhorter said that as to which section of town contributes the most newsprint, it's a toss-up between the area near Tower Road and the Glenview area behind Murdale."

"The least amount that we pick up is on the first pickup and that's everywhere on the east side of the tracks," McWhorter says. "We won't even get probably 500 pounds from that pickup."

He said that on the average he gets about 10 pounds of newsprint from each household that contributes.

ALTHOUGH THE CITY ordinance requires residents to separate only newspapers from the rest of their trash, McWhorter said that many of them also save other material such as glass and aluminum for him. He said he appreciates receiving other items to be recycled.

Ratter said that although the city ordinance currently calls for only newsprint to be separated for trash, other materials could be added to the recycling program later.

"The ordinance is expandable but this has not been considered," he said. "The council very clearly indicated that all it wanted to do to begin with is newsprint."

"I think Carbondale is a real good place to try this experiment because there seems to be a great deal of people who are philosophically in tune to getting into recycling," Ratter said, referring to current the newspaper collection project.

Group gives help to men with violent tendencies

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

"Attitude is the father of behavior, and when you change attitude, you can change behavior," said David Frost, a member of the group Men for Creative Change.

Change is a big part of what the group is all about. MCC provides help for men with violent tendencies or behaviors, according to Easy Zimmerman, counseling psychologist at the Counseling Center and a member of the group.

"Our purpose is to try to make people more aware of men's roles in violence and rape. Another part of our purpose is to run a therapy group for men who want help in handling their tempers and want to change," Zimmerman said.

The group began about a year ago last May when representatives from the organization Rape and Violence End Now conducted a workshop in Carbondale.

The small group meets two times each month. They work to provide assistance and support to men struggling with the cycle of violence, Zimmerman said.

He said it is often hard for men to seek someone for help. The men who've been counseled have usually been referred from such places as Child and Family Services, the court system, police departments, ministers and anyone who knows they need help.

"Men with violent tendencies in the community need to know there is help. It doesn't cost anything and they don't have to go to the hospital for it," he said.

The group is trying to increase membership. Meetings are open to all interested parties. The next one will be held at noon Monday at the Counseling Center.

Zimmerman got involved in the group as a result of his work. He began to deal with victims of rape and abuse as well as male abusers and abusees.

Easy Zimmerman

"I am very opposed to violence but I'm not a complete passivist. I think there are better ways to deal with things than with force. That sort of thing strikes a chord in me. I'd like to see us get away from violence," he said.

Typically, the men in the last support group weren't abusers, but men who felt the need for a that type of group, according to Zimmerman. Even though the group is meant to be a community organization, most of the members were connected with the University in some way.

Zimmerman said he hopes that men's attitudes towards women are changing, but for society in general, there are still some strong ideas about male domination that are accepted.

"The group's existence lets women know there are men who care and are willing to do something about the problems they face," Zimmerman said. "The group lets women know that not all men are interested in maintaining the status quo that is harmful to women."

One of the group's goals is to provide a supportive environment and services for men. The services offered include speakers to interested groups, support groups for men and individual counseling. They hope to get workshops and therapy groups started. All services are confidential.

A second goal of the group is to provide its members with a greater understanding and alternative notions of masculinity. Frost explained that a lot of men feel that to be real men that have to be a John Wayne type.

"Men feel that they have to be strong, and sometimes there is a price to pay for that," he said. "Sometimes it is nice to be sensitive."

The group examines tradition to see what to keep, what to add and what to take away. Frost said it gives men permission to look at the alternatives instead of insisting that they be stamped out of a mold.

Another of the group's goals is to increase awareness of the violence in the community.

MCC is the first non-fraternal men's organization in the Carbondale area, according to Frost.

They try to accomplish this goal by offering workshops and speakers and by pointing out the statistics of violence in the area.

"In violent situations in which men and women are involved, men tend to be perpetrators while women tend to be victims. We try to get that information out and get men thinking about why that is," Frost said.

A fourth goal is to increase awareness that rape is a male problem. Frost said, this violence comes from men and they need to be addressing and collectively looking at this behavior.

The last goal goes hand-in-hand with the fourth. They hope to reduce violence in the community, especially violence against women.

"Researchers have linked violent pornography with violence in the community. Men lose perspective of women as individuals and view them as objects," Frost said.

"Sometimes when men go to a workshop, group or speaker, they pick up an awareness of something that they did to help reinforce violence toward women. We hope to be making an impression on individuals through our functions. We hope that they go out and share what they discovered with their friends," he said.

Zimmerman said the group has discussed a lot of things they want to accomplish in the future. For example, they'd like to set up a men's support network, get a speakers bureau started and possibly even start a men's center.

"We are not trying to change laws, but people," Frost said. "We are not trying to change society, but we are trying to make an impact here. We are trying to increase awareness of behaviors. We're men looking for help from other men."

Fun, self-defense are aims of Martial Arts Club

Beth Paize, a University Martial Arts Club member and graduate student in agribusiness economics, practices kicks.

By Thomas Mangan
Staff Writer

The instructor gives orders in an oriental dialect. The students, hanging on his every word, jump, kick and punch imaginary attackers.

It's a class in the Korean art of Tae Kwon Do, taught by the SIUC Martial Arts Club by club founder and Master Instructor Elliot Freeman.

Freeman, a 3rd degree black belt in Tae Kwon Do, says the club was started a few years ago after a woman was raped and killed walking from classes to her dorm in University Park.

"Shortly after the murder occurred, I, along with some other black belts in other martial arts disciplines, became interested in starting a mass gathering, leaning toward women, that would teach self-defense in an academic atmosphere that would be fun for the students," he said.

He stresses that his classes are designed to be fun. Because many people, and especially women, are put off by militaristic instructors and forced discipline, Freeman concentrates on having his students develop self-discipline.

While Freeman's area of expertise is Tae Kwon Do, other disciplines are also taught.

"We wanted to introduce different styles in a combined class to find the best method of self-defense for each individual," he said.

Aikido, a Japanese soft style, uses concentric circles to defend against an attack, so that a small person can fend off a much larger opponent, by knowing where to attack.

"Aikido is designed so that when a small person is attacked, they can use their knowledge of power level zones to easily overcome a much larger attacker. In other words, the harder the opponent charges, the harder he is going to fall. People don't have to weigh 500 pounds to be able to defend themselves," Freeman said.

About one-third of the club members are women, he says, and they all have their own reasons for being there.

SIUC alumnus Naseem Rakha, a Tae Kwon Do brown belt and the highest ranking woman in the club, says she got started because she wanted to be able to feel safe.

"I started about two-and-a-half years ago because there were a lot of rapes and murders in Carbondale at the time. I don't want to feel intimidated when I go out at night," she said.

A lot of women are afraid to join, thinking self-defense is only for men, but the need for being able to defend oneself should outweigh any other fears, Rakha said.

"It requires a great deal of commitment to study the art of self-defense, but it soon becomes integrated into everything you do. I take a lot more precautions now than I did before I learned to defend myself," she said.

Theresa Noakes, graduate student in exercise physiology and introductory karate instructor, says she got started four years ago because she needed a good workout.

"It started when I was in physical education and needed a method of exercise. The self-defense aspect is good though, since I'm a single woman living alone," she said.

Kim Brown, a 16-year-old Carbondale High School student, said she also joined the club to get a good workout, but she wanted something more.

"This way I can receive benefits greater than just being in good shape, such as competing and earning higher ranks," she said.

Kathy Busch, junior in public relations, has been working out with the club for about a year-and-a-half. She says she has always felt the need to know how to defend herself.

"I feel more secure when I leave the house at night. I feel that what I know about self-defense will help me if I'm attacked by someone with no knowledge of martial arts. It's better to know something than nothing when it comes to defending myself," Busch said.

Freeman says that there is also an academic environment in his classes. Subjects such as philosophy, aerobics and communication are taught either directly or indirectly by martial arts instructors, he said.

There are 13 classes in beginning, intermediate and advanced Tae Kwon Do style, plus two classes in Aikido. Freeman said.

Ag students need more science classes, prof says

By Jeff Curl
Staff Writer

Universities should toughen the science requirements that agriculture students have to take, said Joe Jones, professor emeritus of plant and soil science.

Jones, who was selected last year as one of the top soil conservation teachers in the nation, retired last month after 20 years at SIUC. His specialty was soil physics.

In the 1940s and 1950s when he was in school, Jones said ag students were required to take a lot more classes in the physical and biological sciences than ag students of today. He said all ag students, whether their specialization is in soil, crops or animals, should have a good basic curriculum in chemistry, physics, geology and biology.

"Ag students here don't have to take enough hours in chemistry and they don't even have to take physics," Jones said. "Agriculture is a field of science, so if you want to be a good agriculturalist, you need a good science background."

Jones said ag students have the opportunity of taking all the science classes they should have, but when they are not required students will just pass them up. He said out of the hundreds of ag students he has seen graduate, only about 8 or 10 have left with the depth of science background he thinks is needed to solve future agriculture problems.

"I wouldn't have taken all the classes that I took if I didn't have to," he said.

Jones said more people realize that farmers feed the world, and this has brought about a greater awareness of agriculture problems like soil erosion. This makes the job outlook brighter for graduating ag students, he said.

"I think that more people realize that soil is one of the most precious natural resources we have," he said, "and that we can't let it erode away."

As more people pressure the government to protect farmmland, the government will give more money to ag researchers to try and solve those problems, Jones said.

Although soil erosion is the biggest culprit facing agriculturalists, Jones said there aren't enough universities researching the problem. One reason is that it would take a lot of money to purchase all the equipment necessary to measure soil erosion, he said. Another reason is that administrators often push researchers to publish a certain number of articles in a given number of years. Studies on soil erosion would take a long time, Jones said, but more universities should start them.

Cubs fans love rooftop view

By Nick Geranios
Of the Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — Some of the best seats for the National League Championship Series are outside Wrigley Field.

The rooftops of 14 apartment buildings bordering the outfield fences of the ballpark were packed with people enjoying Tuesday's game between the Chicago Cubs and the San Diego Padres.

Many of the spectators were family and friends of the building owners, but some had paid $80 for a rooftop perch.

A three-flat behind the right field fence offered prime viewing for Robert Ramos, whose father owns the building, plus some of his friends and others who paid $80 to watch the game.

The nine people on the roof sat on chairs or leaned against the building facade, drinking beer, eating peanuts and watching replays on a color television set.

"This is better than going in there," said Phil Zarcione, who brought binoculars but found he didn't need them.

"We didn't pay anything, but we got the best seats in the house," Ron Sikora said.

Even though a sign on a nearby building proclaimed the area to be 495 feet from home plate, the view from the Ramos' roof was excellent.

The only problem was that the ballpark bleachers obstructed the view of right field.

"Look at this great view!" James Torenko said after he climbed three flights of stairs, a ladder into the attic and yet another ladder onto the roof.

Torenko and Kim Kreft, former college fraternity brothers, met by accident on the street outside the ballpark, and decided their best chance to see the game was from a rooftop, since scalpers were asking well over $100 per ticket.

Some of the rooftops are posh, with comfortable seating, bathrooms, barbecue grills and umbrellas. Some even have bleacher seating.

On others, people just recline on the tarpaper, open a beer, and relax.

Fans can clearly hear the Wrigley Field public address announcer and see the scoreboards.

"Hopefully we'll get some bleachers for the series," said Ramos, who said that in past years, enthusiasm about the Cubs didn't reach levels to warrant the investment.

His family has lived in the building 11 years, but it was only after the Cubs defeated the Mets in a crucial August series that people began asking to use their roof, Ramos said.

He said he hasn't been inside Wrigley Field in five years.

"To tell you the truth, I wanted to go this year, but haven't had the opportunity,"

he said.

Ramos, who has seen 45 games this year, said his father has been reluctant to let others use the roof in the past, because too much wear would cause it to leak.

"But we had offers of over $200 for people to get up here," he said.

Cardinals will not bring ex-starter Morris to roster

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals Coach Jim Hanifan has decided the National Football League team does not have a spot for veteran fullback Wayne Morris at this point in the season, a team spokesman said Tuesday.

Morris, 30, did not report to the Cardinals this year, choosing instead to stay with his family in Texas and care for his sick brother. The eight-year veteran told the Cardinals Monday he had changed his mind and wants to play because doctors dropped plans for his mother to donate a kidney to his brother.

Cardinals spokesman Greg Gladysiewski said Hanifan talked with Morris Tuesday and told him a rash of injuries have left no room for Morris on the roster.

"The club is not in a situation to make that roster move with him," Gladysiewski said.

NL playoff divides loyalties in San Diego pizza parlors

By Mark J. Kreidler
Of the Associated Press

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Talk about divided loyalties. Patrons of Chicago Brothers Pizza in San Diego don't know whether to root, root, root for the Cubbies, Padres or Tommy Lasorda.

"It gets confusing," says Bob Steinborn, a co-founder and one of the four Chicago Brothers, who aren't brothers at all but a group of former Illinois residents who came west to make a living. "I feel sorry for our customers."

What the customers see, depending on which of the two city restaurants they visit, are Steinborn and co-owner Barry Robbins in the red, white and blue of the Cubs, and "brothers" Craig Schechtman and David Levy in the brown and yellow worn by the Padres.

The topping, so to speak: Los Angeles Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda is the restaurant's television spokesman, hawking the frozen pizza that has made Chicago Brothers easily recognized on the West Coast.

Steinborn said he and his cohorts grew up avid Cubs fans, and attended Chicago's Von Steuben High School together. Three of them went on to the University of Illinois; Levy attended Southern Illinois University.

After graduation in 1975, "we were all sick of the weather in Chicago, and we decided to come someplace where it was nicer and try to make a go of it." The logical choice: a restaurant featuring the kind of food they relished back home.

With Levy supplying most of the recipes, the foursome put together a menu that represents "a compilation of every place we'd eaten in Chicago," Steinborn said.

The product was Chicago Brothers, a restaurant featuring not only Chicago-style deep dish pizza but ribs and chicken, and it was an immediate hit in this city of nearly 1 million.

In 1980, the owners opened a second restaurant, and more are possible, said Steinborn. But the National League championship series has caused something of a family feud.

"If the Cubs win, Craig works for me for a week," Steinborn said. "If the Padres win, it's vice-versa." He said the other two have similar bets, as well as small cash wagers on the outcome of the playoff.

"We can't bet a lot. We lost all our money betting already," says the owner, who with his co-owners will be in attendance when the series moves from Chicago to San Diego on Thursday.

The four are making their loyalties known during business hours, parading their respective team colors before bewildered and amused diners.

But "the reaction here was blasé when the Padres clinched," Steinborn said. "In Chicago, they were going crazy. I think around here they didn't really get a chance for it to sink in, since the clincher was sort of an anti-climax."

"I wore my Cubs hat and jersey into the restaurant, and I'd maybe get a few comments, but no one really got upset. If you wore a Padres hat into a bar in Chicago, you'd get tossed out."

Stopping Wisconsin's rushing game major concern for U of I

URBANA (AP) — Illinois Coach Mike White has the run on his mind this week: stopping Wisconsin's and starting Illinois'.

"We must improve our rushing defense because they are running the ball well," White said at a Tuesday news conference. "We must improve our running game — it's one of the strengths of this team and we've got to use it."

Illinois returns to Memorial Stadium to meet Wisconsin on Saturday, one week after losing at Iowa, 21-16. Iowa overwhelmed the Illinois defense with its high-powered running attack, and White said Wisconsin has a similar offense.

"We feel we need to get ahead and force them to alter their game plan a little bit," White said. "Obviously, we're anxious to play Wisconsin, get back home and get on track."

Last week, White said his line did not block crisply and his backs did not run with intensity.

White has a two-fold problem with the run this week. Wisconsin is second in the conference with 220 yards a game on the ground; Illinois is seventh with 138 yards. On defense, the Badgers are third against the rush, while the Illini are sixth.

Wisconsin's Larry Emery is the main ball-carrier with 474 yards in 62 tries.

"He's got the speed to break away and he is quick to get to the hole," Wisconsin Coach Dave McClain said.

Boilermakers play No. 3-ranked Ohio St.

By Brenda C. Coleman
Of The Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — Purdue Coach Leon Burtnett says his team will face "the best offensive line we've seen so far" in trying to hold onto its tie for first place in the Big Ten when it plays host Saturday to unbeaten Ohio State.

Coming off a 13-10 victory against Michigan State, Purdue's task will be to contain the No. 2-ranked Buckeyes' 6-foot-2, 230-pound tailback, Keith Byars, who leads the conference in rushing with 611 yards in 111 carries.

Asked Tuesday how his team visualizes that attempt, Burtnett laughed and said: "We can visualize a big freight train running through us, I'm afraid. I think the thing we're going to do is just concentrate this week on getting a lot of people to the football. No one person is going to stop Keith Byars."

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce credited Purdue with being "a tremendously different football team than they were last year," mainly because Purdue has turned the ball over to its opponents only four times this season and has capitalized heavily on opponents' turnovers.

That is better even than Ohio State's performance — five turnovers this season.

"We're going to have our hands full," Bruce said. Ohio State shares the conference lead with Purdue and 13th-ranked Michigan, all of them 2-0 in Big Ten play. Michigan, 3-1 overall, will play host Saturday to Michigan State, 0-2 and 1-3.

In other conference action,

Iowa, 1-1 and 2-2, will be at Northwestern, 1-2 and 1-4.

Northwestern Coach Dennis Green said the Wildcats would try to neutralize the triple threat presented by Ronnie Harmon — the best all-purpose Big Ten runner this year with 456 yards rushing, 161 yards in pass receptions and 161 yards in kickoff returns.

"We're going to have to stop him," Green said.

The Hawkeyes are coming into the game with a 21-16 win over Illinois in a nationally televised game last Saturday.

Texas looks to keep No. 1 ranking

By Herschel Nissenon
Of The Associated Press

Having become the fourth team this season to be ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press college football poll, is Texas also about to become the fourth team to fall from that lofty perch?

It may happen to the Longhorns eventually, but probably not this week. They are 29-point favorites over Rice despite Coach Fred Akers' protestations that "they (Rice) have got the same conference record that we do (0-0) and the only thing really that's important about all these games is how you do in your own conference. Anything else doesn't really make that much difference when it's all said and done."

Schedule-wise, Rice might be in a good position. The Owls are playing at home and catch Texas not only looking back to their impressive showing against Penn State but also looking ahead to Oklahoma. Rice, however, is looking ahead to a thorough beating... Texas 42-6.

Last week's prediction record was 24 right — including the Upset Special of South Carolina over Georgia — 15 wrong and one tie for a percentage of .694; on the year, it's 170-56-4-.752. Against the spread, last week's score was 19-13-0-.594; for the season, 61-56-1-.521.

No. 2 Ohio State (favored by 8.5) at Purdue. Ohio State 28-17.

No. 3 Washington (by 20) at Oregon State. Washington 35-14.

No. 6 Florida State (by 10.5) at Memphis State. Florida State

31-14.

No. 7 Brigham Young (no line) at Colorado State. BYU 38-14.

No. 9 Oklahoma State at No. 8 Nebraska (by 9.5). Nebraska 24-14.

Maryland at No. 11 Penn State (by 7.5). Penn State 24-14.

North Carolina State at No. 12 Georgia Tech (by 14.5). Upset special of the week: North Carolina State 24-21.

Michigan State at No. 13 Michigan (by 12). Michigan 28-10.

No. 14 Miami, Fla. (by 1) at No. 16 Notre Dame. Notre Dame 27-24.

Stanford at No. 17 UCLA (by 9). UCLA 28-14.

No. 18 Auburn (by 9.5) at Mississippi. Auburn 21-14.

Tulane at No. 19 Vanderbilt (by 15). Vanderbilt 28-21.

Braves name Haas

to succeed Torre

By Tom Saladino
Of The Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Eddie Haas, who has been in Atlanta's organization since 1965, was named the Braves' manager Tuesday, replacing Joe Torre who was fired.

Haas, 49, who has been with the Braves as a minor league manager, instructor and coach, managed the Richmond club of the Class AAA International League for nearly four years before being named first base coach with Atlanta in July.

Torre, 44, who was dismissed Monday, led the team to the National League West title in 1982 during his first season with Atlanta and wound up as the most successful manager in Braves' history since the franchise moved from Milwaukee in 1966.

During his three seasons in Atlanta, he had a 257-229 record, finishing second to Los Angeles in 1983 and tied with Houston for second behind San Diego this season with an 80-82 mark.

When asked why he had soured on Torre, Ted Turner, owner of the Braves, responded: "I wouldn't say soured was the right word. I like Joe tremendously. Joe's a terrific guy and a great manager. I, and the front office, just thought it was time to make a change."

Turner said he offered Torre another job in the Braves' organization, but Torre "expressed a desire to manage on the field next year."

Haas has a one-year contract to manage, and he was the only serious candidate for the job, Turner said. He gave no salary details.

"Haas has a lot of experience teaching younger players and we have a young ball club," the owner said.

Frey paid dues en route to managerial career

By James Litke

Of the Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — Baseball was about all Jim Frey ever cared about, even when the best it offered him were cheeseburgers in dingy diners and hotel rooms in minor-league cities so hot that he slept in a half-filled bathtub.

He overcame a weak arm, slow feet and too little muscle to win two batting titles and the Texas League's Most Valuable Player award in 1957 — but never the right to call himself a major league ballplayer.

"LOOK AT this body," the Chicago Cubs manager said, rising to his full height of 5-foot-9 inside a sparsely furnished manager's office at Wrigley Field. "This isn't the body of a pro athlete."

To punctuate the statement, Frey looks down over the tops of his Mr. Peepers-styled glasses and pats his waist, which is no longer so much rising as it is expanding.

"But I was determined to hang in there, to do whatever I had to do to stick," he said.

"Getting 14 (playing) seasons out of this body is a kind of compliment itself."

"Some of the guys who supposedly wasted their careers didn't realize that knowing you gave everything is what it's all about. The guys that don't are guys that wind up on a bar stool saying they were cheated," Frey said. "They never know that the thrill of this thing is to play as hard as you can."

YEAR AFTER year, Frey showed up for minor-league opening days in suit and tie, and every year watched the kids who arrived in T-shirts and old slacks move up and past him. When each successive crop asked about the dignified dress, he gave the same answer: "Because," Frey explained patiently, "this is my big leagues."

IT REMAINED that way until 1963, when Frey closed out his days between the foul lines and tried his hand selling real estate in his native Cincinnati. That lasted only a few months until, like so many other fringe players, he found baseball was what he knew best.

Frey spent the next seven years in Baltimore's minor league system, managing the farm team in Bluefield, W. Va., in 1964-65 and scouting for the Orioles until he was named a coach with the parent club in 1970.

Frey's fellow coaches through many of the following years were Billy Hunter and George Bamberger, the manager none other than the redoubtable Earl Weaver. A dynasty was in the making at Baltimore and no better apprenticeship was available in all baseball.

Even so, Frey might have been comfortable with his small corner of that world, had not Hunter and Bamberger got shots at running big league clubs. After that happened, Frey told his wife, Joan, he was getting out of baseball if the same chance wasn't waiting for him down the road — and soon.

IN 1980, his shot came when Kansas City decided to replace Whitey Herzog, who finished second in 1979 after losing three straight American League championship series to the New York Yankees.

Frey inherited a talented, but volatile mix of ballplayers and not surprisingly, took the Royals to yet another division championship. He also ended the Yankees' jinx with three straight victories before losing to the Dallas Green-led Philadelphia Phillies in the World Series.

When the strike strike-shortened 1981 season resumed in August, Kansas City was skidding along at 30-40 and a franchise that had known only success since 1975 was coming apart at the seams. His days were numbered.

Frey got fired and sold his house, complete with furnishings, to his successor, Dick Howser.

CLEARLY, OF all the lessons James Gottfried Frey accumulated in his 32 years — 35 of them spent in baseball — none have made a greater impression on him than that work ethic.

And that made an impression on Green, himself an compulsive worker who had left Philadelphia for the general manager's job in Chicago and was looking for someone to take over as field manager in 1984.

"I NEVER kidded myself about this team," said Frey.

"All I tried to do was end up with 25 guys who'd root and pull for each other," he said.

Some Chicagoians don't care; the Cubs are no news to some

By Debra Hale
Of the Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — With playoffs already starting, Chicago Cubs fever may be contagious, but some people seem immune to the epidemic.

Take Dawn McMahon, a bookkeeper at the Ultimate Sports Bar and Grill, where 450 Cub fans went through about 500 cases of beer the night their team clinched the National League East title.

Ms. McMahon, who works during the day, missed the celebration and says she was "probably sleeping" at the time.

"I JUST don't care," she said, adding that she didn't learn of the Cubs' clinching the National League East title until the next day as she took a train to work.

"I'm the only one at work that didn't watch it on TV," she said. "I didn't know anything about it."

She said she'd like the Cubs to win the World Series "but I'm not overly excited. I'm not jumping up in the air."

THEN THERE'S Cynthia Quiroz, a beautician at Magic Comb Beauty Salon in downtown Chicago. She's never been to a Cubs game and doesn't care about the Cubs' fortunes.

"I don't like sports," she said.

And if that weren't enough to make a bleacher bum fall out of the Wrigley Field bleachers, she said she also didn't know until three days after the fact that the Cubs had clinched the National League East title.

And she didn't know — and doesn't care — which team the Cubs will face in the playoffs. She said, "It doesn't matter."

OTHERS, LIKE John Taylor, 30, a beautician at Marilyn's Chateau of Beauty in downtown Chicago, don't have Cubs fever either — but for a different reason.

"I just think they're just setting themselves up for a big letdown," Taylor said. "I've lost faith in Chicago baseball teams."

At Evergreen Funeral Home in the south Chicago suburb of Evergreen Park, Terry Hornburg, wife of the funeral home director, said mourners even talk about the Cubs during visitation hours.

But she said she's not "all caught up in the Chicago Cubs" either, although she loves sports.

"I'd rather see the White Sox win the pennant in the American League," she said.

LOU ABBOTT, 72, said she loves sports and hopes the Cubs win the National League pennant but said, "I don't have Cubs fever. I don't have any sports fever."

In fact, she said she gets "darned mad" about all the Cubs fever news coverage.

"I get so damnable sick after repeat, repeat and repeat on TV," she said.

Nettles taken out, rests hand

CHICAGO (AP) — Third baseman Graig Nettles was scratched from the San Diego Padres' starting lineup Wednesday in Game Two of the National League Championship Series against the Chicago Cubs.

A Padres' spokesman said that Nettles, who shared the club lead with Kevin McReynolds during the regular season with 20 homers, had a swollen left hand. He was replaced by Luis Salazar, who shared duty with Nettles at third during the season.

Doelling shows improvement for Saluki women harriers

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Most athletes compete in sports in which they have strong high school background.

An exception to this rule is Saluki distance runner Kathryn Doelling, who is emerging as one of the top runners on the women's cross country team despite her lack of previous running experience in high school.

Doelling, who attended Okawville High School, said the school didn't have a cross country program. She said the only two girls' sports offered were basketball and softball.

"The only time we would get an opportunity to run was in basketball practice," she said. "Most of the girls hated it, but I loved it."

DOELLING SAID her high school basketball coach, Robert Ragsdale, partially influenced her to attend SIU-C two years ago. He was a former Saluki cross country runner and he knew Claudia Blackman, who at that time was the Saluki women's cross country and track coach.

"Blackman sent me letters, and it was a setup so I can be a walk-on," Doelling recalled.

Doelling, a junior who was put on scholarship this fall, has improved a great deal since posting a time of 22 minutes, 25 seconds in the 5,000-meters. That was her best time as a freshman.

At the Eastern Michigan Invitational Saturday, she was the Salukis second finisher with a personal best effort of 18:18. Overall, Doelling has improved her times in three of the four races this year.

DOELLING SAID a couple of factors have contributed to her improvement.

"I have another year of experience, and I'm gaining more confidence in myself through Coach Don DeNoon," she said. "He is such a positive person it begins to rub off on you."

DeNoon, who has had all nine of his runners on this year's team place on the top 16 all-time school list, said he has been pleased with Doelling's progress.

"I think we're beginning to see what her abilities are," he said.

Saluki women's cross country runner Kathryn Doelling has made steady improvement since coming to SIU-C as a walk-on in 1982.

"I think she is learning how to compete, to get her maximum effort out of her potential and training. It's certainly going to be difficult for her teammates to reach out and beat her if she continues to improve."

DOELLING SAID eating the right foods plays an important role in her running ability. She said she tries to consume a lot of fruits and vegetables, and breads and cereals, which contain a lot of carbohydrates.

"If you drink diet Coke and eat potato chips you might be able to run 60 miles a week, but you won't have strength to do anything else," said.

Doelling, an accounting major, has excelled in the classroom as well. She carries a 4.0 grade point average on a 4.0 scale, and plans to graduate in the spring after only three years of college. She said she wants to get her CPA certificate and work for a national accounting firm in St. Louis, Mo.

She said she hasn't made up her mind on attending graduate school and using her last year of eligibility.

DeNoon said he would like to see Doelling come out for another year.

"I'm encouraging her to stay here another year. She is beginning to find herself as a runner," DeNoon said. "But she might lose $30,000 by staying in school another year."

Saluki women golfers face test in tourney with Big Ten rivals

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's golf team will face its toughest competition of the season in Bloomington, Ind. this weekend at the Lady Northern Intercollegiate Tournament.

"This is the strongest tournament on our schedule," Coach Sonya Stalberger said. "Many good teams will be there, including all the Big 10 schools."

Stalberger said a team to watch will be Ohio State and a strong Illinois State team will also be after the title. Indiana University, the host team, should be tough. Other top contenders include Michigan State, Minnesota, Iowa, Kentucky and the University of Illinois.

The 54-hole, three-day event is designed to invite all the schools north of the Mason-Dixon Line and changes hosts each year. Last year, the tournament was held at the University of Iowa and the Salukis finished 10th in a field of 21. Stalberger will make no prediction as to where the Salukis will finish in this year's 18-team field.

"It will be good for us to play in stiff competition," she said. "Our team is coming off a good tournament at Purdue and it's helped our confidence. Everyone's game is coming around."

The Indiana University course will play tight in a different sense than the Purdue South course because the fairways are lined with trees. Fall leaves will make finding balls in the rough difficult. But the course is scorable, Stalberger said.

"The course puts a premium on thinking and playing smart golf when you get in trouble. And it rewards smart shots with good position," she said.

Three Salukis have played the course before. Lisa Kartheiser and Jill Bertram played the course in 1982. Leslie Thompson also has experience there because she is from Bedford, Ind.

"Leslie has improved. She's a fighter, a competitor with a good attitude and she doesn't give up," Stalberger said.

Stalberger said Lisa Kartheiser's game is about the best she has ever played. Kartheiser should have a good tournament and should be in the battle for individual honors, she said.

Stalberger said she is looking for Bertram to have her best tournament and said Gi Magnusson and Pat Putman are improving and should do well for the Salukis.

"I'm real confident in the five players. All five earned their spots on the traveling squad by putting in the effort, working hard and wanting to play for SIU," Stalberger said. "This is the first tournament where we will only take five, so we need everybody to play well, everybody to contribute."

Media group sues over Illini's refusal to release documents

URBANA (AP) — Preliminary arguments are scheduled for Thursday in a lawsuit seeking to force the University of Illinois to release documents in the NCAA investigation and punishment of the school's football program. The suit by Illini Media Co. is

Cubs use speed to beat Padres 4-2

By John Nelson
Of the Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs turned off the power and turned on the speed Wednesday and moved to within one victory of their first World Series in 39 years.

With Bob Dernier's base-running providing half their runs, the Cubs defeated the San Diego Padres 4-2 and took a two-game-to-none lead in the National League Championship Series.

The waiting may finally be over for the Cubs, who haven't won the pennant since 1945. No NL club has ever lost in the playoffs after winning the first two games.

On Wednesday, the Cubs not only used speed, but, as the wind diminished as a factor, left-hander Steve Trout continued Chicago's control over the San Diego hitters.

"Although this club is pictured as a power club, I've said all along that in the second half it was the consistency of our pitching that was our real strength," Cubs Manager Jim Frey said.

The Cubs won Game One Tuesday 13-0, getting seven strong innings from Rick Sutcliffe and five home runs — two from Gary Matthews — with a strong wind blowing toward center field. Without a home run or much wind on Wednesday, Dernier got the Cubs an early lead by scoring after going from first to third on a ground ball in the first inning. And he stole second and scored a run in the fourth inning.

"We've taken the approach all season that we take one game at a time," Dernier said. "San Diego has their backs to the wall, and we have to play with the same intensity we have."

Dernier said the Cubs' strategy against San Diego was to "produce a run early and give our starters a lead. Regardless of the method, it makes it a lot easier for our starters."

Trout, adding another laurel to the best season of his career, worked 8 1-3 innings, giving up both San Diego runs on just five hits. He walked three and struck out two.

"It's important to go to San Diego 2-0 instead of 1-1, and I just wanted to do my part," Trout said.

Trout's performance brought to full circle an irony of baseball history. Before coming into this series, the Cubs' last postseason victory was the sixth game of the 1945 World Series when Chicago beat Detroit's Dizzy Trout, Steve's father.

"There's a lot of history, a lot of memories there," Trout said.

The series now switches to San Diego for Game Three Thursday night. If necessary, Games Four and Five of this best-of-five series will be played on Saturday and Sunday in San Diego.

"I guess the simplest thing to say is that our backs are against the wall," Padres Manager Dick Williams said. "We're going back to our park. That's an advantage to us. Needless to say, we have to win the next three."

Lee Smith, who had 33 saves during the season, closed out the victory by getting the final two outs. He struck out Carmelo Martinez and got Terry Kennedy on a long fly to left.

Between Dernier's run-scoring efforts, the Cubs scored twice in the third inning on a double by Ron Cey, who had homered in the first game, and a sacrifice fly by Jody Davis.

Haywood regains old form for Salukis

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

The Saluki football team's victory in the 1983 Division I-AA National Championship game served as a bittersweet moment for middle guard Sterling Haywood.

Haywood, a junior and three-year starter from Youngstown, Ohio, was as happy as any of his teammates about the victory, but he was disheartened by the fact that he tore a cartilage in his knee during the first quarter of the game against Western Carolina.

The injury would cost Haywood dearly. Surgery was required in January, and he was forced to miss spring practice as a result. In the meantime, new Saluki coach Ray Dorr had shifted linebacker Mike Brascia to the starting noseguard position.

HAYWOOD HAD received All-Missouri Valley Conference honors from both the Associated Press and United Press International in 1983, but when he reported to fall practice this season he found himself in a reserve role. Haywood said the move left him discouraged, but he was determined to get back into the lineup.

"I was hurt, because I was beat out by Mike Brascia, a very good player, and I didn't know if I'd ever get back in the lineup," Haywood said. "But Coach Dorr had patience. My knee got better, and I was able to play again."

Haywood won his position back by default just a few days before the season began when right tackle Ken Foster was declared ineligible. Brascia moved to tackle and Haywood stepped in at noseguard.

"I didn't care how I got back in," he said. "I just wanted to play again."

HAYWOOD HAS picked up where he left off last season. He leads the Saluki defense in quarterback sacks with four, after leading the club with 10 sacks in 1983. Haywood has also made 30 tackles, including 14 solos, in SIU-C's first five games.

Despite Haywood's prowess at registering sacks, he does not look on this ability as a motivational lift for himself. He said a sack helps the entire defense.

"I figure if I get a sack, I not only help myself, but I also help the secondary," he said. "I'm not going to leap through the air or anything like that."

THE FACT that Haywood plays the defensive line at all is a small wonder. He stands just 5-foot-9 and weighs 213 pounds, and continually takes on offensive linemen who outweigh him by as much as 50 pounds. Haywood said quickness, along with help from his fellow linemen, help him overcome this deficiency.

"I try to use quickness and outmaneuver the other linemen," he said. "Mike Brascia and Darren Wietecha also help me out a lot. They're not very big, but they're strong, and they can handle the big linemen."

HAYWOOD IS one of six Saluki players who hail from Youngstown, where former SIU-

C Coach Rey Dempsey once coached. Dempsey brought in many players from Youngstown during his seven years in Carbondale, and Haywood said this is the primary reason he chose to attend SIU-C.

"There's a lot of talent around Youngstown," he said. "I decided to come here because I wanted to be around a lot of hometown boys."

Haywood said he did not attend Youngstown State University because its coaching staff does not generally recruit intra-city players.

"Youngstown didn't recruit me. They don't recruit hardly anybody from the city," he said. "They didn't even try to recruit Terry Taylor, and he became a first-round draft pick with the Seattle Seahawks."

HAYWOOD IS colorful. He sports a shaved head and is often heard passing jokes among his teammates. He said former Saluki linebacker, John Harper, who played for the National Football League's Atlanta Falcon in 1983, shaved Haywood's head when he was a freshman.

Haywood said he plans to remain active in football as a coach once his playing days are over. He said he would like to make a career of coaching.

"I plan to coach, and I hope maybe Coach Dorr will take me on as a graduate assistant after I graduate," he said. "I've learned a lot from Coach (Rob) Sherrill and the other two defensive line coaches I've been under since I came here."

Striking ump's attorney meets with league heads

By Bruce Lowitt
Of the Associated Press

Richie Phillips, attorney for striking umpires, met Tuesday night with American League President Bobby Brown and Wednesday with National League President Chub Feeney as the major league playoffs continued with amateur umpires on the field.

Before taking a flight from Kansas City, where the Detroit Tigers were playing the Royals Wednesday night, to Chicago, where the Cubs defeated the San Diego Padres 4-2 for their second straight playoff victory, Phillips said he had come to the league presidents because "I have to posture myself so that I don't seem like the bad guy, like the guy who is trying to take baseball away from America."

But baseball went on in Chicago, with Game 2 of the NL playoffs, with steak-and-seafood salesman Dave Slickemeyer behind home plate, physical education teachers Joe Pomponi at first base and Joe Maher at second, and retired pilot Dick Cavanaugh at third.

The AL crew in Kansas City was Bill Deegan, who umpired for 10 years in the majors, John Bible, Randy Christal, Larry Zibel, Harold Jordan and Mike O'Dell.

The quartet that umpired

Chicago's 13-0 victory in Game 1 with a minimum of controversy, also worked during the seven-week strike in 1979 and has worked together in Big Ten Conference college baseball.

A minor controversy arose on a close call at first base in the bottom of the seventh inning in Chicago. Leadoff batter Ryne Sandberg hit a grounder to the right of shortstop Garry Templeton, who went deep in the hole, fielded the ball and threw to first.

Pomponi immediately and emphatically called Sandberg safe. Dick Williams, the San Diego manager, came out of the dugout and argued briefly with Pomponi over the call. On a television replay, Sandberg appeared to be out. The call became moot moments later when Dave Dravecky picked Sandberg off first base.

Blake Cullen, the NL supervisor of umpires and director of information, said that Phillips and Feeney would meet Wednesday and, that boded well for an early resolution to the dispute. But, he added the "cautionary word," "eventually."

There were six umpires at the AL playoffs but only four for the NL.

Cullen also said the NL would stay with four and that if the strike is not settled by Thursday, the NL would hire "guys who worked together in 1979."

He added that for the World Series, "We'll probably get one crew from all around."

The key issues in the dispute involve pay and job security, two areas covered for only two years in the four-year contract agreement reached April 5, 1982. Those parts of the contract expired Sunday, when the regular season ended.

Phillips said the pay increase being offered now by the major leagues amounted to $39,000, to be divided among 61 umpires. "TV money has gone from $50 million in 1983 to $200 million in 1984," he said. "We are supposed to get a share of that. We are orbits apart."
